THEIR Majesties and Their Royal Highnesses the Princesses set out from Gloucester Lodge, Weymouth, a little after Five o'Clock this Morning, and arrived here a little after Six o'Clock in the Afternoon.

Downing-Street, September 20, 1796.

THE Dispatches, of which the following are Copies, have been received from Robert Craufurd, Esq; by the Right Honorable Lord Grenville, His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs.

Head Quarters of His Royal Highness the Archduke Charles of Austria, Lauffen, August 27, 1796.

MY LORD,

I Have the Honor to inform your Lordship, that the Main Body of the Austrian Army of the Upper Rhine passed the Danube at Donawert on the 13th Instant, and halted near that Place on the 14th; the Rear Guards still occupying the Road leading from Norlingen and Hockstadt to Donawert, the former at the Defile of Haarbarg, the latter at a Village about a League Eastward of Blenheim.

On the 15th, His Royal Highness, leaving General La Tour with a considerable Part of the Army of the Upper Rhine, to defend the Lech, marched with the Remainder down the Right of the Danube, with an Intention of re-crossing it, in order to operate against General Jourdan's Right Flank, whilst General Wartensleben should advance and attack his Front. The Rear Guards were of course withdrawn from the above-mentioned Posts, and Donawert evacuated in the Course of the Day.

When His Royal Highness commenced this Manœuvre, General Wartensleben was in the Position near Amberg. To turn the Left of this Position, General Jourdan had detached a considerable Column on the great Road leading from Nuremberg, through Newmark, to Ratisbon; and, in order to oppose this Column, Major-General Nauendorf was advancing from the latter Place with a Corps of Four of the Battalions newly arrived from Austria and some Light Troops.

On the 17th the Troops, which the Archduke had brought from the Army of the Upper Rhine, repassed the Danube, in Two Columns, at Neuburg and Ingolstadt, and encamped near those Places, the latter of which being capable of Defence, and important from it's Situation on the River, a Garrison was thrown into it. The Column that passed at Neuburg was commanded by Lieutenant-General Hotze.

On the 18th the Troops halted.

The Intention was to proceed from hence with the Right Column from Ingolstadt towards Beilngries, and Lieutenant-General Hotze's considerably further to the Left; but, in the Night from the 18th to the 19th, Intelligence was received that General Wartensleben had been obliged to quit the Position of Amberg, and return behind the Nab.

The above-mentioned projected Movement of the Archduke's Corps now became very dangerous, as it's Communication with General Wartensleben would have been in the greatest Degree precarious, and it's Retreat, in case of Defeat, (being cut off, as it might have been, from the Road to Ratisbon) extremely difficult. His Royal Highness therefore directed his March more to the Right, and arrived on the 20th Instant with his Right Column at Hemman. From this Time Major-General Nauendorf's Corps, which advanced the same Day to the Heights of of Taſwang, formed His Royal Highneſs's advanced Guard. Lieutenant-General Hotze's Corps marched towards Beilugrieſs.

By this March the Archduke ſecured the Road to Ratiſbon, and the Right Flank of Jourdan's Army was equally threatened, he having advanced to the Nab.

A heavy Connonade, heard in the Direction of Schwartzfeld on the 20th Inſtant, and other Reaſons, made it neceſſary to proceed but ſlowly until more certain Intelligence of General Wartenſleben's Situation could be obtained, and a combined Plan of Attack finally arranged. The above-mentioned Cannonade afterwards proved to have been an Affair of no Importance.

On the 22d the Enemy's Corps, which had advanced from Neumark, and taken Poſt behind a deep Ravine, through which the great Road paſſes near the Village of Teining, was attacked by the advanced Guard under General Nauendorf, and obliged to quit it's Poſition and retreat towards Neumark.

On the 23d the Archduke and Lieutenant-General Hotze's Corps, having reunited, advanced in ſeveral Columns, and drove the Enemy from their Poſition behind Neumark. General Hotze purſued them to within a League of Altdorf, and at the ſame Time puſhed forward a conſiderable Column of Cavalry, and ſome Light Infantry, under Major-General Prince John of Lichtenſtein, on the great Road towards Nuremberg.

The Right Column of the Archduke's Corps encamped near Neumark.

On the 24th the long-intended combined Operation took Place againſt General Jourdan's Army. This Operation was performed in Seven Columns. That of the Right of General Wartenſleben's Army advanced towards Weger; another large Column proceeded from Schwartzfeld, having a third ſmaller Force to its Left, and a Fourth advanced from Swandorf towards Amberg, in the Neighbourhood of which Place the Three latter Columns were to unite, and that of the Left to form a Junction with the Archduke's Right, which proceeded from Neumark, by Caſtell, to Amberg, having Two ſtrong Corps to the Left, of which the one under Lieutenant-General Staray advanced to Herſchpruck, and the other under Lieutenant-General Hotze to Lauffen. This excellent Diſpoſition would certainly have been followed by a very deciſive Battle, had not the Enemy, alarmed at the menacing Movements of the Archduke's Corps, retreated ſo precipitately as to make it impoſſible. Their Loſs muſt, however, have been conſiderable; and Two Battalions of their Rear Guard, which defended as long as poſſible the Defile of Amberg, were completely annihilated by ſome Squadrons of Auſtrian Cavalry. The different Corps encamped in the Evening in the Neighbourhood of Amberg, Herſchpruck, Lauffen, &c. General Jourdan is continuing his Retreat towards Forcheim.

Whilſt theſe Operations were carrying on, General Moreau croſſed the Danube at Donawert; and acted with his whole Army againſt General La Tour, who has been obliged to quit the Poſition of the Lech, and on the 24th took another behind the Iſer. General La Tour's Loſs has been very inconſiderable, although the great Superiority of the Enemy obliged him to retreat.

Thus, my Lord, have I endeavoured to give your Lordſhip an accurate Account of the late Events and Movements; and it is with the deepeſt Concern I muſt conclude it by informing your Lordſhip that my Brother, Lieutenant-Colonel Craufurd, was unfortunately wounded and taken on the 25th Inſtant.

The Archduke has been pleaſed to write to General Jourdan, reclaiming him; and I have no Doubt of their giving him up, as it would be contrary to every Rule to detain a Perſon as Priſoner of War, who was not, at the Time of his being taken, employed in a Military Capacity.

It is impoſſible for me to expreſs to your Lordſhip how much the Archduke, and, I may ſay, all the principal Officers of the Army, have ſhewn themſelves intereſted about Colonel Craufurd; nor can I conclude without aſſuring your Lordſhip that his being taken was not owing to any Imprudence; though, indeed, his Conduct, ever ſince he has had the Honor of being attached to the Auſtrian Army, has been marked by that conſpicuous Zeal, Activity and Courage, which he cannot help diſplaying, even when only a Spectator of Military Operations.

I have the Honor, &c.

(Signed) ROBERT CRAUFURD.

Head Quarters of His Royal Highneſs the Archduke Charles of Auſtria, Bamberg, Auguſt 31, 1796.

My Lord,

I Have the Honor to inform your Lordſhip, that after the Affair of the 24th Inſtant, General Jourdan continued his Retreat in ſeveral Columns through Velden, Pegnitz, &c. in the general Direction of Ebermanſtadt and Forcheim, he has been cloſely purſued by the Archduke's Army, under which Denomination I compriſe that lately commanded by General Wartenſleben, as well as thoſe Troops which His Royal Highneſs brought with him from the Danube.

On the 25th Inſtant the Advanced Guard, under Lieutenant-General Kray, marched by Sultzbach to Hohenſtadt, and a conſiderable Column of the Enemy's Baggage was taken or deſtroyed in the Defile between that Place and Velden. The Troops which had encamped the preceding Evening near Amberg, followed General Kray's March, and the Archduke took his Head Quarters at Sultzbach.

On the 26th Lieutenant-General Kray purſued the Enemy in the Direction towards Græffenberg, and Lieutenant-General Hotze advanced from Lauffen towards Erlangen on the Rednitz; the former having his Right covered by Major-General Elſnitz, in the Neighbourhood of Velden, Neuhang, Blech, &c. as had the latter his Left by Major-General the Prince of Lichtenſtein, who had paſſed through Nuremberg. The Archduke's Columns marched from the Camp of Sultzbach to Herſpruck on the Pegnitz.

On the 27th Lieutenant-General Hotze, having croſſed the Rednitz, moved towards Hochſtadt on the Aiſch, Prince Lichtenſtein's Corps forming his advanced Guard, Lieutenant-General Kray's Corps marched marched to Græffenberg, Betzenſtein, &c. and the Army from Herſpruck to Lauffen.

On the 28th the Prince of Lichtenſtein's Light Troops approached on the Left Bank of the Rednitz, very near to Bamberg. Lieutenant-General Kray marched to Neukirch, and the Archduke to Heroldſberg.

On the 29th, upon the Approach of the Advanced Guard, the Enemy abandoned precipitately the ſtrong Fort of Forcheim, ſetting Fire to the Mills and Bridges on the Wiſent to cover their Retreat. Their Rear Guard, conſiſting of nearly a Diviſion, took Poſt in the Night with it's Left to the Heights of Eggleſheim, and it's Right to the Rednitz, on the Road from Forcheim towards Bamberg. The Army encamped between Baierſdorf and Forcheim.

Early on the Morning of the 30th, Lieutenant-General Kray moved forward to attack the Enemy in their Poſitions near Eggleſheim, but they abandoned it ſo quickly that no ſerious Affair could be engaged, nor could the Column, which had been ſent through the Mountains to turn their Left, arrive in Time to fall upon their Retreat, ſo that their Loſs was not conſiderable. Lieutenant-General Kray purſued them towards Bamberg, and the Archduke took his Head Quarters at Hirſchaid. On the Left of the Rednitz Lieutenant-General Hotze advanced to Burg Eberach, puſhing forward his Advanced Guard under the Prince of Lichtenſtein to Eltman on the Meyn. Lieutenant-General Staray's Corps, which had followed General Hotze's March, advanced to Cloſter Eberach. Very early on the Morning of the 30th, Jourdan's Army, that is, the heavy Artillery, &c. began to croſs the Meyn, at Hallſtat.

During the Whole of the Operations which I have had the Honor of deſcribing to your Lordſhip in this and my laſt Diſpatch, His Royal Highneſs's great Aim has been to bring General Jourdan to a deciſive Battle, but the bad Roads and Defiles the Troops had to paſs between the Danube and Amberg conſiderably retarding their March, gave Jourdan Time to get off; and he has ſince ſucceeded in avoiding a general Engagement, wherein he has been greatly favoured by the Nature of the Country, which is ſo extremely hilly, woody and interſected, as to make it impracticable to employ the Cavalry.

Notwithſtanding it is much to be regretted that it was not poſſible to bring the Enemy to a general Battle, yet there are ſtrong Reaſons to hope that thoſe maſterly Manœuvres, by which the Archduke has forced them to ſo ſudden a Retreat, and has already driven them conſiderably out of the Direction which Jourdan undoubtedly muſt have wiſhed to take, may ultimately have as happy an Effect upon the general Iſſue of the Campaign, as they, at all Events, will be honorable to His Royal Highneſs.

I am not yet enabled to inform your Lordſhip of the Number of Priſoners made by the different Columns: A conſiderable Number were taken on the 23d in the Affair near Neumark, and in the Affair of Amberg there were between Nine Hundred and a Thouſand. Of what has been taken ſince I ſhall have the Honor to acquaint your Lordſhip in my next.

A Corps under Major-General Nauendorff was detached on the 25th Inſtant to reinforce General La Tour, who is behind the Iſer.

On the 27th Colonel Craufurd was left behind by the French, with a Safeguard, at Beuznſtein, they having found it impoſſible to tranſport him any further without endangering his Life; they exacted his Parole not to ſerve againſt the Republic till exchanged, which will, I believe, take Place immediately. He has been moſt ſeverely wounded in the Head by a Muſket Ball, but I have the Happineſs to inform your Lordſhip that the Archduke's own Surgeon, whom His Royal Highneſs (whoſe Goodneſs on this Occaſion has been great indeed) was pleaſed to ſend to him, as well as the other Surgeons who attend him, give me the greateſt Reaſon to hope for his Recovery.

In caſe of my Abſence from the Army for a few Days, Captain Anſtruther of the Guards, who came lately from Berlin, will have the Honor of informing your Lordſhip of every Thing that happens.

I have the Honor to be, &c.
